INDEMNITY.

Japan is Tendered a Stupendous Sum by China.

The Amount is 100,000,000 Taels and the War Expenses of Japan.

China Knows the Jig is Up and Wants to Settle—At Washington the Amount is Considered Excessive, and a Smaller Sum May Be Agreed Upon.

HIROSHIMA, Nov. 23.—It is reported that China has intimated that she will offer to pay a war indemnity of 100,000,000 taels, and in addition pay all the war expenses incurred by Japan.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—In accordance with a suggestion of Japan the state department has notified Minister Dun, at Tokio, and Mr. Denby, at Pekin, to transmit such direct offer as China may wish to make to Japan. As the cable directions were sent Tuesday, sufficient time has not yet elapsed to determine whether China will consent to make an offer direct and definite, as Japan insists must be done.

An Associated Press cable from Japan states that China has intimated her willingness to pay an indemnity of 100,000,000 taels, and in addition pay all the war expenses incurred by Japan. As the war expenses reach 150,000,000 taels the total offer of China would be 250,000,000 taels. The tael is a Chinese silver coin worth about seventy-five cents at the present exchange, so that the whole payment would be approximately $175,000,000 American. The amount is regarded here as quite large, and it is believed arrangements between the two nations could be effected on terms providing for a smaller war indemnity. Diplomats here say that under ordinary circumstances it would take some time for China to formally present its offer to Minister Denby, but owing to the fact that the Japanese are now at the walls of Port Arthur, about to make the last blow at China's greatest fortress, it is anticipated that China may hurry the negotiations to a conclusion. It is expected that Minister Denby will transmit the offer by telegraph to Tien Tsin and Shanghai, and thence by cable to Yokohama. The understanding is that China and Japan will pay the expenses of the American ministers incident to the negotiation.

The advance on Port Arthur is regarded as having an important bearing on the peace negotiations. Lieut. Miyoka, naval attache of the Japanese legation here, says the advance movement has been most cautious, as the ground for forty miles around Port Arthur has been found fairly alive with powder mines connected with electric wires to Port Arthur. Three days ago the Japanese were within a day's march of the fortress, but it was necessary to send ahead small scouting parties to pick a route away from the mines and electric wires.

The regular roads could not be used for the artillery, as it would have been blown up, and accordingly the big guns have had to be moved in circuitous routes through woods and morass. It is regarded as likely this cautious march will have been completed Thursday, and the Japanese legation is hourly expecting word that the decisive blow has been struck, though a long siege may be necessary, as the fortress was one of the strongest defenses of modern times. It is believed that a Japanese success would quickly close the peace negotiations, but that a repulse would impel China to hold off further.

Columbian Half Dollars.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The management of the Columbian exposition having finally declined to defray the expenses of recoining the Columbian half dollars which have found their way into the treasury, they have been offered to the public at par in exchange for gold or gold certificates, and a considerable sum of them has been distributed in that manner.

INDIANS MUTINY

And Take Possession of C. D. Rand, a Whaling Schooner.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 23.—At the Westminster assizes six of the Indian crew of the sailing schooner C. D. Rand were found guilty of mutiny. Just outside of Berbing sea on last season's cruise, this crew took possession of the vessel and remained in command for nine days.

The Indians outnumbered the white crew three to one. At length the captain took advantage of a favorable opportunity and drove them into the hold, where he kept them confined.

For the defense it was claimed that the captain supplied them with whisky, gave them no food, and was taking them to Cooper island instead of to Behring sea, and the Indians, fearing barbarous treatment at the hands of the Russians at Cooper island, revolted.

THE CHEN YUEN,

China's Greatest Battle Ship, Rendered Worthless.

The Celestials Are Now Practically Powerless on the Water.

The Great Vessel is Beached, and Commodore Lin, Who Was in Command, Anticipated Official Condemnation by Committing Suicide.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The navy department Thursday received a cable from an officer of the American fleet in China, detailed for the purpose of giving confidential information of important events in the eastern war, stating that the "Chen Yuen," the great Chinese battle ship, in leaving Wei-Hai-Wei harbor, on the 18th inst., was accidentally damaged by a torpedo, and was afterward beached, there being no docking facilities. She is, therefore, now useless. Commodore Lin, who was in command of the vessel, anticipated official condemnation by committing suicide.

Wei-Hai-Wei is the great arsenal of China, and it is presumed the Chen Yuen went there recently from Port Arthur, where she had been with the rest of the Chinese vessels that survived the battle of the Yalu.

Wei-Hai-Wei harbor is directly across the bay of Corea from Talien-Wan, distant one hundred and fifty miles, and it is significant that the Japanese Admiral Ito telegraphed to his government, under date of the 18th, from Talien-Wan, stating that the principal Chinese fleet, with four guns, was lying inside the harbor at Wei-Hai-Wei, and that although for two days the Japanese fleet had made every effort to induce the Chinese vessels to come out, their attempts have proven futile. The admiral appears, then, to have returned to Talien-Wan.

The Chen Yuen possibly came out to attack the Japanese fleet, when she touched one of the submarine mines, which the Chinese themselves had placed in the harbor as a means of defense. With the loss of the Chen Yuen, China becomes practically powerless on the sea.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A dispatch from the Che Foo to the Central News says that all the vessels of the Japanese fleet are now at Talien-Wan, and troops are marching southward to attack Port Arthur. The Chinese there are making proparations to present a determined front against the enemy.

Peacemaker Killed.

FAIRVIEW, O., Nov. 23.—Kearney Brown, aged 22, went to his father's home on Thursday and raised a quarrel with the family. Mrs. Brown, foreseeing trouble, called to Lewis Moore, who was at work near the house. As Moore came in Brown was in the act of shooting his father, but was frustrated by Moore, who, in trying to secure the revolver, received the bullet above the heart. The wound is probably fatal. Brown is now in jail. Moore is a married man and the father of four small children. It is said Brown was intoxicated.

Terribly Burned by Powder.

GALLIPOLIS, O., Nov. 23.—David Williams, a miner living at Vinton, this county, met with a sad accident Wednesday. He was pouring a keg of powder into a dish when a spark from his lamp fell into the vessel, igniting about twenty-four pounds of powder. It exploded with terrific force. Williams' face and body were badly burned, his eyesight destroyed and his left ear burned off. He can not recover. His suffering is dreadful.

More Smallpox at Deerfield.

ALLIANCE, O., Nov. 23.—Two more cases of smallpox were reported from Deerfield Thursday, those of Edward Randall and his daughter. They were visiting at the home of Wm. Hazzard, when his son broke out with the disease. Young Hazzard is the faith curist who recklessly exposed himself to the disease. All business is suspended in the town, and no meetings of any kind are held.

Gold Coming In.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The New York agency of a large Canadian institution has received from its correspondents at San Francisco $250,000 in gold within the last two days, and $500,000 in gold has been shipped by the bank of Montreal to its agency in this city for the purpose of subscribing to the government loan. A Wall street banking firm with Paris and San Francisco connections, is also receiving small parcels of gold from California.

As Pennoyer Puts It.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 23.—Gov. Pennoyer, speaking in reference to Japan's reply to the offer of mediation by this government, says: "I see that the Japanese government has followed my example by reminding President Cleveland to attend to his own business. For the sake of the country, the president ought not to have allowed himself to be snubbed the second time."

The Great Wedding Next Monday.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A St. Petersburg dispatch to the Daily News says it is stated that Czar Alexander left a document to be opened nine days after his death. When the document was opened it was found to contain an entreaty to Czar Nicholas to marry Princess Alix directly after the funeral. Hence the wedding has been fixed to take place on Monday.

Wealthy Immigrants.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 23.—Among the immigrants from the steamship Dresden, from Bremen, was a family of four persons who had a fortune of $120,000. The head of the family is a Hungarian named Huber Beck. They are from Buda Pest and bound for North Dakota.

George D. Teller, for many years land and traveling agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, died at Buffalo, N. Y., of apoplexy. He was 75 years of age.

VERY WARLIKE.

The Tone of the Mexican Papers is in Favor of a Scrap With Guatemala.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 23.—The Universal of Thursday contained a very warlike article regarding the Mexico-Guatemalan troubles. It says:

"In consequence of the continued attacks against Mexico and her government, made by the official Guatemalan press, it was rumored Wednesday morning this country would declare diplomatic relations with Guatemala at an end."

Continuing, it makes the following observations on Mexicans and Mexican fighting qualities: "In Guatemala they say the Mexicans always fled before the Americans and the French.

"The world knows that the Mexican soldier does not turn his back. Churubuso, Chapultepec, Pueblo, etc., are witnesses of that.

"With Guatemala we do not expect glory or the gaining of laurels. We have offered them friendship and they return back ingratitude, and our men and our people are not in a humor to listen to the diatribes of the Guatemalan press."

GHASTLY FIND.

Thirty Bodies Piled Together in the Murderers' Cave in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 23.—A hideous discovery has just been made near the town of Churintzio, in the state of Michoacan, by a freighter named Pascual Gomez.

The find consisted of thirty human bodies in an advanced state of decomposition and piled one upon another in a cave, which was almost impenetrable on account of the stench arising therefrom.

Antonio Jiminez, a native of the town and a freighter by occupation, had his head mashed to a jelly by a bandit at Tasumbos recently, and Clofus Gomez, another man, was robbed and murdered for his money at the same place shortly afterward. Pascual, a brother of the last victim, while engaged in searching for him, made the discovery, which explains many mysterious murders which have occurred in Michoacan in the last few months by a notorious gang of bandits.

The Czar Depressed in Spirits.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says that Emperor Nicholas is suffering greatly from insomnia, and is consequently very much depressed in spirits. The czarina has become very much emaciated as the result of her vigils at the bedside of her husband and the subsequent tax on her physical strength imposed by the journey to St. Petersburg and her participation in the various ceremonies over the body of the late czar.

Treachery Somewhere.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The Figaro Thursday morning said that an attempt had been made to steal the patterns of the new deport gun which was shipped in padlocked cases to Calais and Bourges by the minister of war. The attempt to obtain possession of these patterns is said to have been made on November 10, and it is added that no one except the presidents of the artillery testing committees knew of the shipment.

Sugar Trust Witnesses Appeal.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The court of appeals of the District of Columbia Thursday granted the motion of counsel for Messrs. Chapman and Macartney, the indicted recalcitrant sugar trust investigation witnesses, for an appeal from the recent decision of Judge Cole, holding that they are liable to punishment for refusing to answer questions put by the senate committee. The date has not yet been fixed.

A Little Girl Kidnaped.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 23.—Alma Howard, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Charles Howard, a Northwestern railway official, is missing from home under circumstances that warrant the suspicion that she was kidnaped. The entire police force, including the Central station detail of detectives, is hard at work following various clews.

Slight Quake at Tacoma.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 23.—Several slight shocks of earthquake were felt here. Windows were rattled throughout the city. The first shock was most severe, being accompanied by rumbling noises, as of a distant explosion, and simultaneously a sheet of flame was observed in the eastern heavens. It is thought Mt. Tacoma is in eruption.

Peixoto Will Visit Us.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—A special from Rio Janeiro says: The United States will soon be visited by Ex-President Peixoto. The ex-president is in bad health, the result of overwork incident to the revolution in his country, and upon the advice of his physician he contemplates a tour.

A Rich Old Mine Rediscovered.

SIERRA MOJADA, Mex., Nov. 23.—Frank Payson and George Brill, two American prospectors, have discovered an old Spanish gold mine, sixty miles north of here, and from samples of the ore, it is believed the mine is one of fabulous richness, worked a century ago.

Big Ships Overdue.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—The Cunarder Catalonia, which was due in port last Monday, has not yet arrived. The Warren line steamer Kansas, which sailed from Liverpool two days before the Catalonia left, has not yet been sighted.

Livery Stable Burned.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 23.—Two fires here Thursday morning destroyed Dudley Baker's livery stable, together with six horses, twelve vehicles and all the hay and corn in stock. It also damaged several adjoining houses. Total loss, $6,000.

Mt. Ranier Causes Excitement.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—Great excitement has been caused throughout the Puget sound country by what is looked upon as an eruption of Mount Tacoma, or Ranier, of 14,444 feet high and one of the loftiest peaks in the state.

ADVERTISE in the TIMES.

THE TIMES leads them all.

READ the first class fiction in the TIMES.

THE TIMES has the same news in to-day's paper that you read in any other paper that circulates in Portsmouth tomorrow. Why get stale news when you can get it fresh for one cent a day.

A FEW things a Republican congress will never do: make sugar free and pay a bounty to the producer; repeal the income tax law; put a duty on wool and a compensatory duty on woolens; make old rags for shoddy manufacturers free again; remonitize silver, or be economical in expending the people's money.

EVEN Zanesville seems to regard the Muskingum route as feasible for the canal connecting the lakes and the Ohio. What the Times Recorder says on the question just fits our case. From Cleveland to Portsmouth via Akron, Mt. Vernon, Columbus, Circleville, Chillicothe and Waverly is the best route by far, and by a united effort on the part of these cities we can obtain it. Scioto county needs Funk now in Congress. Who was it defeated Funk at the state Republican congressional convention?

What is being done to secure the ship canal for the Cleveland-Zanesville-Marietta route? The cities along other proposed routes are alive to the advantages to be derived and to the necessity of concerted and persistent activity in urging their claims. The Cleveland, Zanesville-Marietta route was a few months ago among those most prominently mentioned. Today it seems to have been dropped from consideration. Why should it be spoken of by others when those most interested are silent and inactive? A ship canal connecting the lakes with the Ohio river will be a matter of fact and no longer of theory within a few years. The cities along it will outstrip their rivals in the race for place and power. They will become the great commercial centers of this section of the country. If the canal touches Zanesville, it will advance to the very first island city in the commonwealth of Ohio. Is this desired on the part of Zanesville business men, capitalists and citizens in general? Is it worth an effort? if it is, then why not make the effort? If it is not let it be so understood and let us sit down in idleness and quit saying that we are in the race when we have collided with some old fogy obstruction and jumped the track or been forced over onto the sod. Then if we hope to win the race, we must settle down to business. Delay may be fatal. There is no use trying to win a race by hard driving after some other fellow gets under the wire. In this race it will be no honor to just escape being distanced. There is no second or third money. It's a case of win or lose.

Zanesville must take the lead. There is no use waiting for some other city to do it. Cleveland has gone off after false gods, and has chosen a wife from among the daughters of our enemies. It has seen fit to lend its influence to the Pittsburg route. From the first Cleveland has refused to co-operate with Ohio cities to secure the location within this state. It prefers to divide the benefits with Pennsylvania and West Virginia. This treachery is not fatal, although it is a serious blow to the Ohio canal and Muskingum river route. It means that a still greater effort must be put forth by the other cities along the route, which remain loyal to their interests and loyal to their state. Will the board of trade kindly wake up, get its whiskers cut, its hair combed, its working harness on, and prepare for an active hustle in the interest of Zanesville?

Her Forethought.

Standing in silence by the ship's rail they watched until the shores of her native land were lost to sight.

Fondly the prince looked into the face of his bride.

"Darling," he tenderly asked, "do you look to the future with any feeling of uncertainty?"

"No. See!"

To prove her trust, she showed him the return trip ticket she had purchased.—Puck.

Harry Peoples, aged about 24 years, a bank clerk, was found dead in his room over the Johnsonburg (Pa.) National bank, Thursday morning, with two bullet holes in his head and a 32-caliber revolver by his side. A mystery.

At Portland, Me., the result of the chemical analysis of the stomach of the late Clinton A. Woodbury is known to have revealed the presence of enough prussic acid to cause death. Mr. Woodbury was insured for $100,000 in the New York Life and Mutual Life Insurance companies. Litigation will result.

Explosion Under a School.

UXBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 23.—A boiler exploded in the cellar of Center school building under the floor of the primary department. This floor was completely torn up, desks and seats were broken in pieces and bricks were thrown through the floor as high as the ceiling, but no one is reported as fatally hurt. Thirty scholars were in the room and rushed out in a mass, many being hurt. Some were unable to get out alone, being completely wedged in, but were released by outside help. Miss Parker, a teacher, was burned a little on the face by steam.

Rate War Begun.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Beginning next Tuesday the Rock Island will put into effect a rate of $9.50 from Kansas City, Atchison, Leavenworth and St. Joseph to Chicago. This is a reduction of $8 in the regular rate. Coming after the collapse of the Western Passenger association, the reduction emphasizes so strongly the passenger demoralization in the west that the meeting of western roads Monday next is almost sure to result in the formation of another association.

Diphtheria at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23.—Alarm is felt over the rapid spread of diphtheria in this city. The health authorities are taking active measures to suppress the disease. So far this month 137 cases and thirty-seven deaths have been reported.

Forest Fires.

VANDALIA, Ill., Nov. 23.—The Okaw river bottom forests, south and east and northeast of the city are on fire. The flames have already burned over a vast area, and are doing considerable damage to the young growth of timber.

Drank Carbolic Acid.

RICHMOND, Ind., Nov. 23.—While playing in the yard Thursday afternoon the 3-year-old son of Mrs. Cora Baker drank some carbolic acid and his life is despaired of.

A ROMANCE SPOILED.

The Bicyclist Discovered That the Fascinating Lady in Bloomers Was His Cook.

A cycling romance was easily spoiled, and so was a cycling costume, in one of the pleasantest suburbs of South London. One Sunday morning as a gentleman was wheeling his way along his favorite country lane, he gradually overtook a lady bicyclist attired in the rational costume which, for a wonder, became her well. Elegantly cut, faultlessly finished, the fair rider's attire, from hat to gaiters, spoke the lady—so far, at least, as style went—and the critical spectator was fast becoming a convert to the aesthetic claims of the new fashion, when the fair rider wobbled, hesitated and was lost in a ditch at the side of the road. Quickly he rushed to her assistance, helped her to her feet and dusted her carefully down, the while she thanked him in stammering accents for his courtesy. That voice! he thought where had he heard it before? and he lifted his eyes to her. Of course he had heard those tones — they were his cook's. He forgot all about the damaged bicycle, flung himself on his own trusty steed, and fled home to his wife.

Inquiries showed that the errant domestic had a friend in service whose mistress was a bicyclist, and in the absence of her employers from town she had allowed the cook to borrow both bicycle and costume wherewith to cut a dash. But the turn of the wheel brought nothing but woe to its unhappy devotee. There was immediately a vacancy for a cook in that suburban villa.—London Telegraph.

THE TREASURER

Submits to the Secretary His Annual Report.

Paper Currency Put in Circulation During the Year, $350,959,190.

Total Paper in Circulation in May $1,175,000,000—The Lowest Point Touched by the Reserve Was $52,191,500—The Retirement of Treasury Notes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The treasury department lost $50,000 in gold paid out to Chas. Waite & Co., at the New York subtreasury. This reduces the gold reserve to $57,692,000, and the general balance to $100,411,000.

The treasurer of the United States, Hon. D. N. Morgan, has submitted to Secretary Carlisle his annual report. He states that the lowest point touched by the reserve was $52,191,500 in August, 1894. Prior to July, 1892, the gold reserve was but little affected by withdrawals of coin, there never having been any considerable demand for the redemption of notes. Then, when gold exports were heavy, the metal was furnished by bankers from their vaults, or was obtained from the treasury for gold certificates, of course without impairment to the reserve. During the last two years, however, the treasury has been called upon to furnish nearly the whole of the requirements for exportation, and there have recently been considerable withdrawals for other uses.

With reference to the retirement of treasury notes the treasurer says that, prior to August, 1893, the treasury had been able to provide for the redemption of treasury notes in silver dollars out of the holdings of free silver, so that there had not been, up to that time, any impairment of the total amount of silver fund accumulated under the act.

On the third of that month, however, the silver dollars and bullion in the treasury had become reduced to the amount required by law to be retained for the payment of outstanding treasury notes and certificates, and the demand for the redemption of notes continuing, owing to the scarcity of small denominations of currency, it became necessary to draw upon the dollars coined especially for that purpose.

The silver fund being thus impaired, the notes so redeemed were canceled in order to preserve the required equality between the silver in the treasury and the notes outstanding. The total amount of the notes retained in this way up to October 31, was $4,790,434.

The amount of the new issues of United States paper currency put into circulation during the year was $350,959,190, having been exceeded but once, in 1892.

The amount of worn and mutilated notes redeemed was $319,002,290. This also has been exceeded but once, in 1893.

The total paper circulation reached its highest point in May last, when it stood at, $1,175,000,000. Since then there has been a slight contraction, caused chiefly by the gradual redemption and retirement of gold certificates, the issue of which was suspended, as the law requires, when the gold reserve of the treasury fell below $100,000,000.

Notwithstanding a change in the regulations, whereby senders of national bank notes for redemption were required to bear the charges of transportation, the redemptions were the heaviest than since 1886, amounting to $105,000,000, or more than half of the average circulation.

HER HALLOWEEN EXPERIMENT.

As a Result the Engagement Will Be Announced Shortly.

"Oh, Emma," said Ethel, sweetly, to her particular chum, "I have something to tell you, dear."

"And I am quite sure that it must be something very nice, judging by your radiant face," replied Emma. "Tell me what it is. I'm just dying to hear."

"First tell me something."

"Well?"

"Did you ever work a halloween charm to find out who is to be your husband?"

"No, but I've heard of such things. You don't mean to say that you have done anything of the kind?"

"Yes. Was it naughty of me?"

"Oh, I don't say that, until I have heard what you did. Was your spell successful? Did you actually see a man's face?"

Ethel nodded her pretty head vigorously.

"Oh, who was the man? But no! Tell me the story just as it happened. How did you work your enchantments?"

"Well, it had to be done precisely at midnight, you know."

"So I understand."

"The charm is this: You take a ripe red apple, and you eat it standing in front of a mirror, finishing it just as the clock strikes the witching hour of midnight."

"How perfectly creepy."

"And the light must be turned down very low, almost out, you know."

"O, you brave girl! I wouldn't have dared do anything like that."

"And just as the clock strikes the last stroke of the midnight hour, the face of your future husband appears in the mirror, over your shoulder."

"You went through all that, did you?"

"Yes."

"And did you see a face?"

"I did, just as clear as anything."

"Whose was it?"

"Jack Bellefield's."

"No."

"Yes."

"How do you account for his face appearing in the mirror instead of some one else's?"

"I think it was because Jack was behind me at the time. He's going to get the engagement ring in a day or two."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Fisher & Streich, druggists.

WITH THE ELECTRICIANS.

THE Pittsburgh (Pa.) chamber of commerce will, it is said, insist that Pittsburgh street cars be equipped with safety fenders.

THE organizers of the new telephone exchange in Clyde, N. Y., report that they are meeting with the best of success in presenting the claims of their system to the business men of Clyde.

THERE will be a general awakening of the storage battery manufacturers, growing out of the refusal by the court to grant an injunction asked on the Brush patents on the chloride battery, says the Electrical Review.

IT is reported that the Pennsylvania Traction company is considering a proposition from a syndicate of Boston bankers to build and equip an electric line from Harrisburg, Pa., to Philadelphia, 103 miles, for $8,000,000, guaranteed speed to be 90 miles an hour.

Desperate.

It is probable that few musicians ever became famous without wishing, at one time or another, that they might find a refuge from the reputation which precedes them wherever they go. At one time the celebrated composer, Verdi, went to the watering place of Montecatini for a much-needed holiday. In one of the apartments assigned to the veteran musician stood a grand piano of splendid tone. Verdi removed the score of "Il Trovatore," which had been laid on the rack by way of compliment, locked the instrument, and called for the son of his host, to whom he said, in solemn tones: "Lead me to the spot which overhangs the steepest precipice." On reaching the summit, the maestro, who was almost exhausted from fatigue, flung the key of the piano into the abyss, saying, with energy: "Now I have done something to secure rest and quiet. On the day of my departure I will send a locksmith to provide the piano with a new key, but while I am here let it remain as it is."—Youth's Companion.

The Reason Why.

When the witch approaches me
With her roguish, laughing eye,
Gowned in mull's simplicity—
Ah, I know the reason why!

When she wears her charming smile,
Rivaling June's sunny sky,
When there's naught of woman's guile—
Ah, I know the reason why!

When she nestles in her hair—
Ebon locks that fall awry!—
Just a rose's subtle snare—
Ah, I know the reason why!

When she sings some quaint old air,
And her voice ends in a sigh,
When she sends me looks that dare—
Ah, I know the reason why!

When we stroll down to the gate,
And her moods are sweet and shy,
When she will not tell my fate—
Ah, I know the reason why!

Love is blind? Nay, for I see
That her moods they all belie.
For, alas! she's fooling me—
That's the reason why!

The Lovers.

They sat upon the cliff that led my way;
I saw them from afar, as hand in hand,
In still content, with not a word to say,
They watched the blue sea and the smiling land.

I neared the place where they had sat them down:
She rose, and gently brushed the spangled grass
With the soft touch of her light summer gown;
Why could she not have staid, and let me pass?

Sweet heart of maidenhood, that could not bear
To have a stranger look upon its bliss!
The youth went with her, but he did not care
If all the world beheld his happiness.

A KNIGHTLY CHALLENGE.

We sing both of arms and a hero—
A knight who was brave, leal and true.
But whose skin by the wind was blistered,
And whose lips were nearly cracked thro'.

He said to the squire at his saddle:
"Go find me some healing balm
To soften my hands and my features,
And this burning torture to calm."

Then the squire gave the spur to his stallion
And galloped o'er hill, plain and wold
Till he came to a place where they sold it—
The magical cream, "MARIGOLD."

Then he laid down a dime on the counter,
And got just one bottle—no more,
And back then he straightway did scamper
To where the knight o'er his sorrows did pour.

And the knight took the fresh, soothing ointment
And spread it all over his skin,
And when he had finished the rubbing,
His face was suffused with a grin.

And he took up his spear and his buckler,
And issued to all his "defi"
To find on the earth such another
As "MARIGOLD," but no one would try.

A WILD NIGHT'S WORK

BY FLORENCE WARDEN

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

CHAPTER I.—WOMAN'S WILES.

Whew-w-w-w! how the wind blew! How it swept along the Kentish fields, driving the snow into drifts, whistling through the bare branches of the trees, and hurrying the black clouds along in the lowering sky!

The mail train was speeding along to Dover, and the passengers, blinking out of the windows, shrugged their shoulders and shivered at the prospect before them.

"If it's like this inland," said one prosperous-looking old gentleman, tucked up in rugs in the corner of a first-class compartment, to his opposite neighbor, "what will it be like at Dover? Ten to one the boat won't cross to-night!"

At the further end of the carriage a young man was sitting, who seemed much disturbed by this remark.

"Do you really think so?" he asked anxiously, joining in the talk for the first time. "It takes a great deal to stop the mail boat."

The first speaker replied with the calm and pompous assurance of an experienced traveler.

"Well, and what do you call 'a great deal,' if you haven't got it there?"

And he pointed with his finger to the snow-covered landscape just as a fresh blast came howling round the flying train, covering the window with a thick white sheet of driving snow.

The young man looked more anxious than ever. He was a clerk in the employ of a firm of stock brokers, and had been intrusted for the first time with a duty of great importance. He was the bearer of a large amount of negotiable securities which, for safety, it was thought advisable to send by hand, and he had to deliver them in Paris on the following day.

When the train stopped at Dover station, therefore, George Llewellyn, for that was the young fellow's name, was among the first of the passengers to spring on to the platform, and to ask eagerly whether the mail boat was going to cross.

THE DETECTIVE CAME UP TO HIM.

"No, sir. She won't cross to-night. The storm's too high," was the disappointing answer of the official.

Llewellyn, however, would not give up hope at once. He had no luggage but his hand bag, and he waited about, refusing all offers of the porters to carry it for him, and made further inquiries, in the vain hope of at length hearing better news.

At last he became aware that something about him had made him an object of suspicion to two men whom, by their boots, he guessed to be detectives; and as, recognizing this, he was about to leave the station, one of these men came up to him very quietly and requested him to step into the superintendent's office.

Llewellyn saw that it was best to comply quietly, and, on finding himself shut in with the detective and a couple of policemen in uniform, he gave at once the fullest details as to his name, his residence, his place of employment, and his present errand. He also gave up his keys, so that the detective could inspect the documents he was carrying.

The examination lasted a very few moments.

"Quite right, sir, thank you," said the man, touching his hat with a smile, "and now you must excuse me for having detained you, but we've just had a wire telling us to be on the lookout for two well-known thieves, a man and a woman, who are supposed to have come over by this train with a number of [illegible] securities. So you see, sir, although it was a bad shot in one way [illegible] you, on the other it was a [illegible] you were traveling with [illegible] although they didn't happen [illegible] cases."

Llewellyn accepted the apology and explanation good-humoredly [illegible] it was by order of the police that was stopped.

"The weather's re[illegible]," answered the man, [illegible]. "Though I don't say [illegible] as to have a little more [illegible] and."

[illegible] the door, saluting [illegible] as the latter passed [illegible] little squalid street out[illegible] with the wind whis[illegible] corners and the snow [illegible] slush at his feet, [illegible] himself what he [illegible] he put up at a ho[illegible] or should he make [illegible] one of an old friend [illegible] who lived, as he knew, [illegible] Dover, off the high [illegible] the latter course. Dr. [illegible] a man who kept early [illegible] who remembered in [illegible] the house lay although [illegible] there since his boy[illegible] that he would be able to [illegible] an hour, allowing for the [illegible] weather.

[illegible] this time twenty-five min[illegible] six, and the snow was [illegible] Suddenly. It did occur to [illegible] the expedition had its [illegible] the value of the property he was carrying, but on the other hand a night spent at a hotel was not without its dangers in the circumstances. So George, who was young, tall, muscular, and provided with a revolver, started on his way through the town.

He could hear the roar of the waves as they broke upon the beach; he had to fight against the wind when he reached the corner of the street. But on the whole the walk, for a strong young man, had its pleasures, for the snow had ceased to be blinding, and a battle with the wind stirs young blood into pleasurable excitement. In a very short time he had got clear of the town, and was on the high road in the open country.

Here the snow impeded his progress more than he had expected; for there was nothing in this high bleak spot to check the caprices of the wind, which swept almost bare great patches of the open land, and swirled the snow into heaps in unexpected places. It was a lonely walk enough, and George began to be puzzled as to whether he was keeping the right way. There were so few hedges or trees, and the featureless character of the country made it easy for the snow to blurr its outlines until they were quite undistinguishable.

He felt rather relieved when he caught the sound of human voices. He waited, as they seemed to be behind him. He heard them again in the roar of the wind. Then they ceased the unseen persons, but then the voices ceased. He presently went on again until he was startled to see in the darkness between him and the sea the dim outlines of two figures keeping pace with him at a little distance. He hailed them again, and the figures promptly vanished.

Without giving way to any cowardly fears George began to wish that he had been more discreet and that he had stayed at a hotel. There was nothing to do now, however, but to go forward as quickly and carefully as he could, for more than two-thirds of the distance must have been traversed by this time.

Unfortunately, however, soon after this incident he lost his way, hopelessly, undeniably. He found himself floundering, knee-deep, in snow, over something which might be a freshly-plowed field or which might be the ruins of a house, but which was certainly not the open road.

After a few fruitless struggles to get on firmer ground George again caught sight, a little way to the left this time, of two figures, which he perceived to be those of a man and a woman. Just at the moment of his discerning them the figures parted, that of the man disappearing from view, while the woman held on her way.

As she was evidently on firm ground, George made towards her at once, not calling out, lest he should frighten her.

Before he came up with her, he saw, by her walk and by her figure, that she was young; and when he addressed her, saying that he had lost his way, she turned her head quickly, and showed him that she was adorably pretty. So entirely was he thrown off his balance by the unexpected sight of such a lovely face, that he stopped short in the middle of his speech, and left her to answer a question which he had not finished asking.

"You are on the high road—to St. Placid's," she said, quickly. "Keep straight on."

And then she glanced, with a sudden change of expression, at the bag he was carrying. Before he could do more than raise his hat and thank her, she had hurried past him like a hare, with just one more look, penetrating, intelligent, from his face to the bag in his hand.

George remained for a moment stupefied; he stared at the retreating figure before him, and fancied he saw her turn, with a gesture of invitation to him to follow and catch her up. Acting on the impression, he started forward, and then there flashed into his mind the words used by the detective at the station: "Two well-known thieves, a man and a woman," had traveled down by the same train as himself. He was at once ashamed of his momentary suspicion that the beautiful girl he had just spoken to could be anything but the angel she looked; but her furtive and eager glances at his bag recurred again and again to his mind.

The wind was still blowing very hard, and the snow, which had for some time almost ceased, began to fall again in great flakes, so that the landscape was soon entirely blotted out from view, and George found more difficulty than ever in keeping the road. At last he saw a large, dark object in front of him, which he recognized as the clump of trees which marked the spot where there were crossroads, and where he should have to take the road on his right to get down into the village, where Dr. Lowe's house stood. The crossroads were at the highest point of the neighborhood, and George could scarcely keep his feet, much less choose his way as he approached it.

Just before he reached the turning he came to a fair-sized house of only two stories, shut in by a garden inclosed by a high wall. Just as George got under shelter of the wall, a door in the middle opened, and out of the darkness the voice of the girl he had just met spoke to him:

"You will never find your way into the village through this snow. Won't you come inside the house until it has left off a little?"

George stopped. He could hardly see the girl's pretty face in the darkness and the blinding snow; but the voice was alluring in its sweetness, and the temptation to look once more upon such exceptional beauty as hers decided him.

"Thank you. It is very good of you, very good of you, indeed. If I am not intruding, I shall indeed be glad to accept your kind offer for a few minutes."

She stepped nimbly back, opening the door for him. He passed through on to a stone-flagged path, which led, under cover all the way, to a deep porch, under which the lamplight streamed brightly and invitingly through the open door.

The curtains of a large window on the right of the porch were drawn; but those on the left were still open, and allowed George to see into a dining-room made cozy by the shaded light of lamps, and by the glow of a bright fire. He caught glimpses of armor, helmets, spears, shields, shining, on a dark rich wall; and of flowers and sparkling silver on a white-covered table.

George, who was half dazed by his struggle with the wind and by the action of the snow upon his eyes, thought vaguely of the story of "Beauty and the Beast," as he staggered up the stone path. There was something mysterious, almost uncanny about the shut-in house and its curiously hospitable inhabitant, which made him change his mind as he realized it, and turn, with an excuse upon his lips, to go out again.

At that moment he heard a key turned in the door by which he had come, and he knew in a moment that he had done wrong in entering. He made two rapid steps back, and was met by the young girl.

"This way," she said, as, passing him quickly with a smile of invitation on her face, she led the way into the hall.

WHEN THACKERAY WAS ANGRY.

The Sailors Who Intended to Play a Trick Changed Their Minds.

Once upon a time the daughters of Thackeray saw that good man thoroughly and heartily angry—angry to the point of profanity. It was during their Italian journey, when they were returning to the ship in Genoa harbor after a day on the shore. "We had to be on board at a certain time," Mrs. Ritchie says, in her Macmillan paper, "so that we engaged a carriage and drove quickly to the quay, where the convicts clanking in their chains were still at work. A boat was found, rowed by some sailors, who certainly did not wear chains, but who were otherwise not very unlike those industrious convicts in appearance. The bargain was made, we all five entered the boat, and as we were getting in we could see our great ship in the twilight, looking bigger than ever, and one rocket and then another going off toward the dawning stars. 'They are signaling for us,' said one of our companions; 'we shall soon be on board.'

"We had pulled some twenty strokes from the shore by this time, when suddenly the boatmen left off rowing. They put down their oars, and one of them began talking volubly, though I could not understand what he said. 'What's to be done?' said one of the young men to my father. 'They say they won't go on unless we give them fifty francs more,' and he began shaking his head and remonstrating in broken Italian. The boatmen paid no attention, shrugging their shoulders and waiting as if they were determined never to row another stroke. Then the steamer sent up two more rockets, which rose through the twilight, bidding us hurry; and then suddenly my father rose up in the stern of the boat where he was sitting, and, standing tall and erect, and in an anger such as I had never seen him in before or after in all my life, he shouted out in loud and impatient English: 'Curse you, go on!' a simple malediction which carried more force than all the Italian polysyllables and expostulations of our companions. To our surprise and great relief the men seemed frightened; they took to their oars again and began to row, grumbling and muttering. When we got on board the ship they told us it was a well-known trick the Genoese boatmen were in the habit of playing upon travelers, and that they would have sent a boat for us if we had delayed any longer."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE LADIES

Enjoy a Charming Reception at the Baker Residence, Washington St.

Another of the Delightful Afternoon Receptions so Popular Among Portsmouth's Society Ladies—Pretty New Fall Costumes in Profusion—The Street Railway Employes To Be Banquetted Saturday Night.

Of the many large afternoon receptions that have been given by Portsmouth ladies, that of yesterday afternoon was one of the most elaborate. It was complete in every detail. The residence of Robert Baker on Washington street was the scene of this event.

It was the beautiful afternoon of an "Indian summer" day, and all the ladies took advantage of this opportunity for the wearing of their new fall gowns.

The rooms were most attractive in their elaborate decorations. Exquisite palms, other rare potted plants and large chrysanthemums were abundantly used.

In the receiving line were Mrs. Baker, and her daughters, Mrs. Ed. Buscher of Washington C. H. and Miss Jean Baker. They stood in the east parlor, the green room, and received the many guests, two hundred and fifteen, between the hours of 1:30 and 5:30. Mrs. Baker's dress was of black silk with trimmings of lace and yellow crepe; Mrs. Buscher wore a handsome gown of pale tan silk with lace, and sleeves of blue brocade; and Miss Baker, a tall handsome blonde, was becomingly dressed in a figured silk, white and blue, the bertha of beautiful lace with beading of pearl passementerie.

The ladies passed from the parlor into the south room, where Miss McGhee, Miss Kate Newman, and Miss Esther Cochrane presided at the punch bowl. In this room the decorations were in pink. After partaking of the delicious fruit punch, the guests were ushered into the dining room by Miss Clara Waller and Miss Sallie Reed. The long table, with seats for twelve, was attractive in its dainty trimmings of green and white, and this same color combination was seen in the refreshments, ice-cream and cakes. Misses Lena Kline, Frances Cochrane and Fan C. Newman were in the dining room.

From the refreshment table the groups of twelve proceeded to the library, the north room, where yellow was the predominating color, and where, in one corner, was arranged the tea table, with its artistic covering and pretty china. Mrs. Tucker sat at the coffee urn, and Misses Hattie Draper, Sara Thompson and Mabel Russell served the coffee and wafers. The young ladies, without exception, looked sweet and pretty in their new gowns. Mrs. W. H. Cadot and Mrs. Robert Baker, Jr., also assisted, registering the name of every guest.

Miss Mary, the youngest daughter, wore a dainty white swiss, with blue ribbon, and circulated among the guests, contributing much to their pleasures by her cordial manner.

A few of the young men invited to make a short informal call arrived at 5:30.

Shortly after the departure of the afternoon's guests Mrs. Baker invited the ladies who assisted into the dining room, where they were served to an elegant supper. At each plate was a bunch of beautiful chrysanthemums. Later they enjoyed a social hour.

WILL BANQUET SATURDAY NIGHT.

All the employes of the Portsmouth Street Railway and Light company are in receipt of invitations to a banquet at Snel's parlors tomorrow (Saturday) night, at 11 o'clock. The affair is given by Samuel P. Baird and Samuel B. Timmonds, to the employes of the company with which they are connected.

THE DERNBACK'S AGAIN.

Another Chapter in Their Variegated Existence—She Met the Cornhusker and Has Flown to Parts Unknown.

Mr. John L. Dernback, the Lucasville, Ohio, farmer, who was in Chillicothe Monday night and at Yellow Bud Tuesday, on the hunt of his wife, who skipped out with a wood chopper named Porter, returned home Tuesday night, on the N. & W. south bound fast mail train.

Mr. Dernback held his own counsel and refused to talk further on the subject. It was ascertained however, that he came here Tuesday with only a few dollars, that his return home was to reinburse himself financially, and consult James Bannon, of Portsmouth, as to how to proceed in the matter, after which he will come back to Chillicothe and make it warm for his unfaithful wife and the illicit object of her affections.

A few months ago he filed, through Judge Bannon in the Scioto common pleas, proceedings for divorce. In his petition he charged Mrs. Dernback with adultery with Porter. The suit was afterwards withdrawn, he paying the costs and she promising to reform and be true.

The daily Gazette learned at noon today that Mrs. Dernback joined Porter at Yellow Bud. He was husking corn for Mr. Shep Kellar. She told Mr. Kellar that she was from Portsmouth, that she had secured a divorce from her husband, and that she and Porter were going to get married.

They remained at Kellar's over Sunday, leaving there suddenly after midnight, Monday. What direction they took, or where they went, is not known.—Chillicothe Gazette.

INJURED IN FLORIDA.

Philip Gableman Notified that His Son Chris Was Hurt on a Florida Railroad.

A few days ago Philip Gableman, of East Tenth street, received a letter from Dr. Joe M. Perry, Lakeland, Polk county, Florida, stating that a young man giving the name of Christ Gableman, and claiming Portsmouth, was in his care as a patient. Dr. Perry is the surgeon of the S. F. railroad. The letter gave no information as to how the man was injured. Mr. Gableman's son Chris left home about six weeks ago, and has not since been heard from, and it is the supposition that he is the man referred to. Mr. Gableman has written for information.

MOTHERS' MEETING

Held Yesterday Afternoon at the Kindergarten Rooms on Bond Street.

The meeting of the mothers of the little kindergarten pupils, which was held yesterday afternoon at the kindergarten rooms on Bond street, was a very interesting one and was attended by 20 mothers. Matters of interest, pertaining to the welfare of the little ones, were discussed and various kinds of light work done. The attendance at these meetings is increasing steadily and much good has resulted from them. At the close of the meeting yesterday a lunch was served.

THE MISSING LETTER.

Miss Annie Rogers, Mr. Baker's Deputy, is Positive That the Package Was Handed to the Train Clerk.

Miss Annie Rogers, clerk for Mr. James Baker at the Wheelersburg postoffice, was in the city today and a caller at the TIMES office. In speaking of that missing package of money Miss Rogers says Mr. Baker counted out the money and handed it to her, that she placed it in an envelope, sealed it and put it in the mail sack, the latter being handed to the mail clerk. She is positive that the money was not lost in the Wheelersburg office. Miss Rogers also says that the statement in a local paper that she and Mr. Baker were called to Chillicothe by the department is false, but thinks the fact that Mr. Baker was in Columbus several days this week, purchasing a large stock of dry goods, may have been responible for the rumor.

BLOOD POISONING.

J. E. Bradford Suffering from it as the Result of Driving a Lasting Tack Into His Arm.

Mr. J. E. Bradford, of Findlay street, an employe of the Excelsior shoe factory, is suffering from a mild case of blood poisoning. Several days ago, while at work in the factory, he drove a lasting tack into his arm, from which his troubles resulted. His right arm is swollen to twice its normal size, from the wrist to the elbow, and pains him considerably.

MAY CHANGE.

Possible that the Water Works People Will Move the Clerk's Office to the Works.

The water works people are not disposed to look favorably upon the action of the council in charging them $150 a year office rent, and it is very likely that an office will be erected at the works and Mr. Hall duly installed there. It is an open secret that Mr. Hall has been advocating a change of his headquarters to the water works building for several weeks, in order that he may keep a closer watch on affairs. His preference may now be considered.
